

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE.

A method of determining the receptivity of radio signals at any given receiving site in an area covered by at least one transmitter by comparing data stored and continuously updated in a receiver against data transmitted
5 and identifying and selecting from all the transmitted radio signals a preferred one.